

Секция «Кристаллография и кристаллохимия»

The crystal structure features of antipinite $\text{KNa}_3\text{Cu}_2(\text{C}_2\text{O}_4)_4$, a new oxalate mineral

Аксенов Сергей Михайлович

Кандидат наук

Российский государственный геологоразведочный университет имени Серго

Орджоникидзе, Москва, Россия

E-mail: aks.crys@gmail.com

A new oxalate mineral antipinite is found in a guano deposit located on the Pabellón de Pica Mountain, Iquique Province, Tarapacá Region, Chile. The new mineral is named in memory of the late scientist Mikhail Yuvenal'evich Antipin (1951-2013), a specialist in the crystallography and crystal chemistry of organoelement and coordination compounds.